

FIANCE MURDERED; GIRL IS DEPORTED

Sad Ending of a Pretty Young Woman's Romantic Trip to America.

CAME TO JOIN LOVER.

Not Permitted to Land and Assassinated Who Had Tracked Him Slashed Him to Death.

On her way back to Italy to-day a pretty eighteen-year-old Neapolitan girl is sobbing over her grief on the floor of the land of liberty she was turned back and saw her fiancé's body lying in the morgue of the Long Island College Hospital.

In the story of the two young Italian lovers, neither over eighteen, was today revealed the secret of the mysterious death of a young Italian in the East. Early Saturday morning the girl was supposed to be on a steamer. His real name is Enrico Gilletto, and he had been followed through two countries and killed at a moment when he was trying to smuggle his sweetheart, Angelina Parinelli, into this country.

Enrico and Angelina were youthful lovers in Naples. But against Gilletto's family's relentless vendetta was waged by a sister-in-law, who was determined to see the girl deported. Two years ago Enrico decided that he was living in a sure flirtation with death than even the smoking Vesuvius above his city threatened. Plighting his troth to Angelina, he came to America. The relentless hand of assassins kept in touch with him as he dodged from town to town in fear of death.

The Girl Detained.

A little over a week ago Gilletto slipped quietly into New York. It is not known where he came from. But he was to meet the ship from Naples that was bringing his Angelina to him. There came the first of the "fatal three" untoward events that ended in death. The girl was stopped by the surgeon of the Marine Hospital, who discovered that she had a well-known case of trachoma, that dread disease of the eyes.

The girl was ordered deported on the Florio liner "Lazio," which was to sail on last Wednesday afternoon. Gilletto succeeded in reaching his sweetheart and learned the news. He was heartbroken at first, but a daring plan suggested itself to him. They plotted to leave Enrico get aboard the ship and show away in a dark corner where the girl could slip him enough food to keep alive on. Getting the girl ashore was impossible, as the ship was watched. The plan worked, and the Lazio sailed with the girl. Thursday the ship's shift broke. Captain Alamanzi waited for a tow back to port and arrived at the Erie Basin Friday, docking at the Long Pier in Brooklyn Dry Dock. It was announced that the passengers would be put on the Lagoria. Gilletto saw all his plans dashed.

Slashed to Death.

Knowing he could not keep hidden he came boldly on deck and on his knees begged the Captain to allow him to stay aboard with his sweetheart until the ship sailed. The girl watched closely, and when transferred was held in a stateroom on the Lagoria. The news of the ship's breakdown had brought a swarm of friends to the ship to say good-bye again. Friday midnight the girl was spotted on board the Lagoria. The girl had disappeared. The crew was turned out for the search. An hour later a searching party heard terrible cries from the pier shed, and rushing in they found Gilletto gasping out his life in head resting in Angelina's lap.

The man had been almost disemboweled. He died without speaking, and the girl, crying of having found her lover dying after he had tried to smuggle her ashore, was heard to sob. Four of the crew were held in the first excitement were promptly released on being arraigned. Gilletto's body remains unclaimed in the morgue. No trace of the assassins has been found.

LOCKED UP FOR FLIRTING.

Hart Was Too Demonstrative and Girl Had Him Arrested.

Milton Hart, a youth of twenty, was trained in the Adams Street Court to-day charged by Miss Florence Fitzgerald, a ticket agent for the Brooklyn "L," with flirting against the young woman's will.

Hart had with many strenuous gestures and in loud cries attempted to flirt with Miss Fitzgerald on the platform opposite to the one on which she was employed. Highly indignant, she had him arrested. But he apologized to-day, and Magistrate O'Reilly set him free.

No More Cheerless Evenings.

It is no more a pitiful sight to see a poor bird cooped up in a cage than it is to see a man demand that his wife and daughters shall remain at home and not supply them with a piano with which they may transform dark and lonely days into hours of happiness and sunshine.

Such exactions on the part of a thoughtless or inconsiderate husband seem the more exasperating when one stops to consider that through yesterday's Sunday World Want Directory Planos of various popular makes were offered at

SWEPT ON BY THE TIDE.

Like a Feat in Water Polo Was the Rescue Made by Koeman and Goeliet.

It was a fortunate thing for four-year-old Thomas Mitchell of No. 301 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street that when he fell into the Harlem River late this afternoon there were two men nearby who are expert swimmers and who were able to battle against the strong tide and bring him out safely. The little boy owes his life to the quick action of Henry Goeliet, a driver, of No. 230 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, and Joseph Koeman, foreman for the American Ice Company, of No. 339 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street.

The Mitchell boy with other toddlers of his age was playing tag on the pier at One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street and First avenue, when he stumbled on the steps and went overboard. His fall was noticed by John Goeliet, a driver, of the Willis avenue bridge. Little Thomas's playmates ran screaming away, but Goeliet's shouts brought Koeman and Goeliet to the scene. The two men jumped into the water together and struck out with the tide at was bearing the child down toward the East River. He had sunk twice when they were close to him. With rare forethought Koeman shouted to Goeliet to tread water while he was. Then Koeman, with a couple of strong strokes, went eight or ten feet further down before he whirled about and breathed the stream.

WALL STREET.

MONDAY, April 16.

One of the pet beliefs of the professional element in Wall street has been for some time that the so-called Standard Oil party and E. H. Harriman were maintaining an offensive and defensive alliance.

Recent happenings have strengthened this belief. The election of President Harding, of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, to the United States Pacific board gathered its chief significance from the fact that the Standard Oil people dominate the Standard Oil management of these two great railroads have been strained for the past few years. It was Mr. Harriman who invited Mr. Harding to become a fellow director in Union Pacific. Now it is the talk of the street that the "standard Oil-Harriman combination" have succeeded in getting the control of the Pacific Coast Company away from James J. Hill and his associates. The fifteen-point rise in the price of Pacific Coast stock since last Tuesday indicates that somebody wanted this stock pretty badly. The price, which was a little above par a few days ago, is now ranging above 120.

The Standard Oil people were made in the stock exchange this morning that St. Paul interests would be able to vote a majority of the stock at the approaching annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Company. The last-named corporation owns valuable properties and rights in Seattle, where the St. Paul's Pacific coast extension is to have its terminus. The Standard Oil people are in a position to close to-day for the payment of the next dividend, and it is possible that some important developments regarding a change in stock holdings may enlighten the public before the end of the present week.

The course of the stock market to-day was indicative of confidence in the immediate and stable bull movement. The buying of Amalgamated Copper generally, led by the Standard Oil people, by traders who have been "holding off" for the last two months. A strong rally in the stock market was expected in the near future.
